HOOSIERS LUSE AT CHICAGO

A Reprehensible Display of Temper by Spectators in Regard to Esterbrook.

Loose Infielding Was Largely the Cause of the Defeat-Boston Lessens Her Big Percentage-Detroit Wins from Pittsburg.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

CHICAGO, May 1.—The League season opened here to-day with a fairly large attendance. The crowd would have been very large but for the extremely disagreeable weather. The work of Indianapolis's famous infield was hardly up to expectations, and yet the Chicagos batted hard enough to win without errors by their opponents. Pfeffer's home-run in the third inning was what won the game, as the Hoosiers started out with confidence and made the audience believe they were going to win.

Healy, the Egyptian from Egypt, Ill., has plenty of cause to be sad to-night. He was put in the box against the Chicagos this afternon to win, if possible, the first of the Indianapo ha-Chicago second series and his support was bad enough to discourage any star pitcher in the land. The Chicago audience was simply itching to see the team in which Easter brook was playing defeated because of the grudge borne that playar ever since the trouble between him and Sullivan in Indianapolis was reported in the papers in this city. Not only was he disgracefully hissed and insulted each time that he went to the bat, but every time the ball was thrown to him by any of the fielders the crowd set up a regular Pittsburg yell to cause him, if possible, to make an error. This no doubt had much to do with his muff of Williamson's foul in the fifth inning. as the crowd arose and hooted at at the top of their voices while he was after the ball. After this three hits and two runs were made by Chicago. Myers, Denny and Bassett were never known to play such a loose infield as they did to-day, which must be attributed to the very cold lake breeze that benumbed the fingers of the players. Hines began the game with a fine two base hit to left field. Myers's grounder played peek-a-boo with Burns and both runners scored on Denny's long drive to right for two bases, but the Indianapolis captain was left at second. Bassett got five balls in the second inping and Esterbrook, notwithstandloud hisses of the crowd, made a single, and Daily a double, on which Bassett scored. He aly reached first, Darling missing the third strike, and then all three men were put out on the bases. A base on balls, a passed ball, one error and a sacrifice enabled Bassett to score once more in the seventh inning. Hines was thrown out at the plate in the eighth inning, but some umpires might have declared him safe. Valentine knew he was in Chicago and umpired accordingly. Myers's error, which gave Sullivan a life in the third inning, was followed by Pettit's triple, Anson's single and Pfeffer's home run, clearing the bases and virtually winning the game then and there for Chicago. Their runs in the first two innings were made by a double, a base on balls and two errors. Esterbrook was not troubled further than to be roundly hissed. The two teams play again to-morrow. Baldwin and Daly and Boyle and Myers will probably be the batteries. McGeachy is expected to arrive to-morrow, and may play in the afternoon. Following is the score of to-day's game:

DETROIT, Mich., May 1. - About 3,000 people witnessed the first game on the home grounds to-day. The weather was exceedingly cold, and even the enthusiasm created by the unfurling of the two championship banners could not prevent the spectators from shivering audibly. The game was too one-sided to be interesting, and there were no features worthy of mention beyoud the superb work of Getzein. Galvin sprained his leg in the fifth and gave way to Maul. The game was called at the end of the seventh inning on account of darkness. Score: PITTSBURG.

PHILADELPHIA, 12; WASHINGTON, 4. PHILADELPHIA, May 1.—Philadelphia had an easy time in defeating Washington, to-day, owing to Daily's wild and ineffective pitching In the eighth inning, with two men out, he seemed to lose all his cunning, and permitted the Philadelphias to knock out seven base hits in succession, which yielded four earned runs. In the eixth he gave two bases on balls, hit Bastlan and made two wild pitches. Bastian was compelled to retire in favor of Childs, on account of the pain caused by being hit with one of Daily's

NEW YORK, 6: BOSTON, 1. NEW YORK, May 1.—Boston's percentage of 1,000 has been broken by the New Yorks, and that, too, in as tame and uninteresting a game as ever took place on the Polo grounds. Keefe pitched for the first time, and, though out of practice, succeeded in holding the visitors down well. Little Madden pitched three innings for Boston, and then, while at the bat, he was disabled by a ball from Keefe, which hit him on the cibew. Sowders took his place. In the fifth inting Sutton split his fluger in catching a fly, and retired. Burdock then played second base; won by a length; Kirklin second, Quotation while Nash went to third, in place of Sutton.

On account of the threatening weather very few people were present, the turnstiles registering

DELPHI May L -Another chapter has been written in the tragedy which resulted in the death of lda Wittenberg at the hands of Ed Chamberlain, her jealous lover. The girl died Friday, and when her death was made known to Chamberlain's mother, she became a raving maniac. There is said to be little hope of her recovery. The pitiable condition of the mother of the murderer is said to have intensified the feeling against him. A special grand jury in White county has been summoned, and Chamberlain's trial will come up within a few weeks. Every lawyer of any consequence at the bar in that county has been retained in his defense. Outside counsel for the prosecution will be called in, and the trial promises to become celebrated in this part of the State. The farmers in the neighborhood in which the young lady lived state that they will give the courts a chance to hang him, and if there is a miscarriage of justice, they will take the matter into their own hands. The feeling against the prisoner is intense. The defense will plead temporary insanity. It is said that the prose-cution will retain Senator Daniel W. Voorhess.

The Eight-Year-Old Son of a Farmer Dies of Hydrophobia, After Great Suffering.

CARTHAGE, May 1 .- Arthur Yates, aged eight, son of Frank Yates, farmer, died in agony yesterday morning, of hydrophobia. Some time last March Frank Yates and family, together with neighboring families, were operating a sugar-camp on Crooked creek. On the evening of the 27th, Arthur started from the camp to go home, and, passing through a lonely strip of timber, was attacked by a huge shepherd dor, which bit him in the face, causing an ugly wound. The wound was cauterized, and nothing more was thought of the matter. On Thursday noon last Arthur began to have sinking spells, followed by spasms, which continued from that time until Sunday morning at 2 o'clock. The most frightful convulsions began Thursday night, when the lad would bark and bowl like a dor. Several physicians pronounced the case rabies. Powerful opiates had no influence, and the spasms continged without cassation until death came.

Brief Mention. Albert McClatchey, a young farmer living four miles north of Fairmount, committed suicide at his home on Monday by shooting himself.

A sanitary conference will be held at Spring-field on May 17 and 18, to discuss important questions, and the State Board of Realth, on Monday, issued a circular letter of invitation to the municipal authorities and health officers of every city, town and village in the State.

Three grafts were stolen from the counter of the First National Bank of Fairbury on Saturday. The amounts of the drafts were $500, $500 and $300, respectively, payable to and indorsed in blank by C. E. Carter, and drawn by the bank on the Metropolitan National Bank, of Chicago. No clew has been found to the thieves.

The authorities of Carthage are looking for Benjamin Anderson, who, on Thursday last, eloped with Flora Roberts, his sixteen-year-old ward. Anderson has been intimate with the girl for some time, and about two weeks ago she gave birth to an illegitimate child. Anderson settled one-third of his property on his wife, and, converting the rest into ready money, started for Keokuk, Ia., with the young girl and her child.

A MODEL HUSBAND.

The Hon. Will Cumback's Plea for Men in a Witty and Entertaining Lecture.

Hon. Will Cumback last night delivered the closing lecture in the Y. M. C. A. course before te blargest audience that has attended any of the number. In introducing the lecturer E. W. Halford recited some of the embarrassments which had attended the course just closed, it being the first time it had ever been attempted in this city. It had, however, succeeded better than was anticipated, and next year it would be conducted under more favorable auspices. He thought that Mr. Cumback's lecture would be a fitting finale to the course. The lecture which followed was one of rare wit and decided interest. The audience was kept in an almost continual roar. Mr. Cumback did not seem altogether sincere in his eulogy of the average husband as compared with the average wife, but as he progressed further he left deprecating the custom of continually adulating woman and saying so little of the virtues of man. His lecture, as he stated at the outset, was the result of his listening to address by the eloquent Dr. Willetts on the "Model Wife." After hearing Dr. Willett's beautiful tribute to the other sex he waited, very patiently, for some generous woman to deliver an address showing the virtues of the model husband. Finding that none of them responded he prepared this one and offered it to some of the best known women orators in the land, saying be thought it would be much more effective if delivered by them. They all declined with emphasis. He had also offered it to some of the leading woman suffrage journals in the country, but there had met with no better success. This indicated that the women did not propose to give the men any taffy until the men gave them the ballot. The speaker thought his sex had not received justice. From time immemorial man had cut no ligure in poetry and had been comparatively insignificant in romance. He quoted a few specimens of poetry to show how woman had been flattered, adding that there were thousands of just such specimens in the production of the last century. He then reminded the ladies that a great many of the poets of the world had been accustomed to spend a great deal of their time about "taverns" and were anything but "sound on the temperance question." A great many of them, while singing the praises and beauties of women, continued to make their wives get up and build the fires. In romance the advanced place assigned to women was just as noticeable, and on the stage it was the woman who always attracted the chief attention as the star. The speaker thought that all this was due to the backwardness of man. "I blush for our tender sex," said he, "when I think that in our innate sense of modesty we have allowed this state of things to come about."

One heard so much talk about woman's love that he would be justified in thinking that she had a "corner" on human affections. He felt that he must lift up his voice against that injustice, but allowed it was like a man crying in the wilderness. It had become customary to blame mankind for all the sin of the world. Even the sin committed by Eve in the Garden of Eden had been laid by some at Adam's door, for there was a familiar old couplet which ran:

In Adam's fall We sinned all. He never read the couplet without becoming indignant. He thought that the truth of the story demanded that it should be revised something after this fashion:

'Twas Eve who first ett it, And don't you forget it,

The office of the husband was a difficult onea piece of testimony which the speaker thought some of the bald-headed men in his audience would corroborate. Nevertheless, nearly all young men appeared anxious to run for the office, and some old men were to be running for the third, fourth and even fifth terms. Before he got into office the young man had a very limited ides of the troubles that awaited him. But after he was in he was not long in finding out. A certain old Irishman and his wife, who were accustomed to quarrel every day of their lives, one day had one of unusual viciousness, and after they were through the wife looked out of the window and observed the cat and dog playing together in the yard. "Look," said she, "how them two brutes are playing together, and you and I can't get along without fightin'.

"Well, jist tie their tails togither and you'll see the fur fly," was Pat's sage reply. The speaker then proceeded in a half serious, half jocose manner to show how many wives there were who made home miserable by their complainings and how many husbands were compelled to come home at night tired out with their day's work and cheer up the children from the despondent influence cast over them by the wife. A happy home was the basis of civilization, and over the door of every home there ought to be written: "Let no one who worries enter here."

Tieben Is Still Worried.

Barney Tieben, of Corliss street, the man bitten on Monday by a dog that was supposed to have hydrophobia, rested easy all day yesterday. and Dr. Fletcher, the attending physician. thinks he will recover from the effects of the bite without suffering any dangers from the disease. Tieben is still worried over the matter, and is being kept partially under the influence of chloral. The dog was killed near Fletcher's pork-house, and the man who killed it requested the coroner to hold an inquest over its body for for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not it was mad. As the work was not in the line of the coroner's professional duties be refused to comply with the request.
